World's Championship

It was the night before the big fight for the world's heavy-weight championship. Ted Berman, the famous sports writer was suddenly stricken ill at home. And rushed to the hospital. The news was phoned at once to Jim Gordon, editor of the Herald-Times.

"He could have at least waited two days," sighed the editor. "How can I get a man to replace him right now?"

"You really have no choice," replied Lou Gerry, the managing editor of the paper. "I would suggest you use Tom Samules. He is the best re-write man we have in the city. And he must know something about fights. Sort of a mystery to him. Some say he was once a college professor of English. Others say he went prospecting for oil in Arabia. But one thing is certain. He is an athlete with his build."

So they sent for Tom Samules. And the editor came right to the point.

"Ever fight in the big time? Don't care if you won or lost."

"Thirty years ago I fought for the world's championship and lost," was the surprising reply.

So Tom Samules covered the fight. His report of it became a classic. He was awarded the $1,000 prize of the Sports Writers Club. And when Ted Berman left, he took over the assignment. One day Jim Gordon gave him another big raise and then asked a simple question.

"You said you fought for the world's championship and lost. Whom did you fight?"

"My mother-in-law" was the simple and direct

Dog Days

There are many versions of this story. The one you will read is taken from a spanish story several hundred years old. Sometimes we all wonder how and why a little story will travel across continents.

Pedro was a carpenter. On the nice sunny days he did his work outside. When it rained he went into his shop. Just now he was building a bookcase for the Count of Aragon. Next to his tools sat a little dog. A man stopped and looked at the dog.

"Permit me to introduce myself," he said. "I am Garcia Mantega. The best dog barber in the entire province. The dog looks so shaggy. What do you say if I said I could make that dog look beautiful?"

"I really don't care one way or another," replied Pedro the carpenter.

"That's good enough for me," smiled the dog barber. "Within two hours you will see a miracle of transformation. The dog will look as though he belonged to the Royal Family in Madrid."

So the dog barber went to work. From time to time people would stop to watch and admire his work. Some even asked him to come and take care of their own particular dogs. When he was finished you could see the pride written all over his face.

"In my field I am an artist," he remarked to Pedro the carpenter. "Just look at the dog. Now be truthful. Would you recognize the animal?"

"The truth is the truth," was the reply. "I would never recognize that this is the same dog."

"Makes me very happy," smiled the dog barber "Now give me ten pesatas and I am on my way."

"I don't have to pay you anything," was the unexpected reply. "And the law is on my side. You see it isn't my dog. Never saw it before."

A Problem

These days you hear the word "Pollution" on every person's tongue. A nice word which really means no cleanliness. So that means you can divide the world into two kinds of people. Those who want to be clean. And those who don't. As simple as that? Maybe yes and maybe no. So here is a story about cleanliness.

The old farmer had his farm way up in the hills. He came to town only several times a year. On this day he went to court and spoke to the judge.

"Your Honor, I want a divorce from my wife. And the sooner, the better. I just can't stand her any longer."

"But you have been married to her for more than forty years," replied the judge. "Just what is your complaint?"

"It is no longer possible for me to live under the same roof with her," said the old farmer. "My house smells terribly. And it is all her fault. She insists on keeping ten dogs and five cats in our living room. And then she has her bird collection. Doves, parrots, and nightingales. She has a pet bear that makes everything smelly. So the time has come for us to part. You can see that, can't you?"

"All you have to do is to open the door and the windows and let the fresh air in," suggested the judge. "That ought to help matters."

"Would make it worse," sighed the old farmer. "Then all my pigeons, frogs, and pigs would escape. And what about my pet calf? Would walk out the front door. No solution, your honor."
